

For the Love of Flowers

In knowing that our world has changed so much over the past year, I wanted to do something different for this month's article. I went back in the archives and pulled these two photos. They are from the Summer Flower Show in 1978. The row after row of beautiful colours are certainly a thing that I've missed seeing since COVID-19. I know that those of you who proudly display your garden's bounty are missing doing this too. This year, we have had virtual flower shows, but they pale in comparison to the real deal. Here's to brighter days and blooms ahead with hopefully a return to real flower shows in the coming year.

Vivian Petho – Archivist

